Jack's Wife.

When Edward Barton asked Jack Kingsley If he would assist him in winning Eve Morrison for his wife Jack mentally turned the question over a few times, and as that effort revealed no plausible reason why the request sould not be easily complied with, he heartfly swared his friend that he would do the best he could for him. A month later he began to wish be hadn't. He had thought he knew Eve pretty well,

Breakers Ahead for the American Man

Startling Estimates and Observations Made by a Distinguished European Scholar.

A solidly-built man, pleasant of speech and courteous of manner, with an appearance of such perfect health and contentment that one must regard him as a living testimonial of the correctness of his own theory of therapeutics —such is Dr. B. A. Walker, the noted special-ist in the treatment of diseases of the brain and neverons existing.

"Hi is quite true that such diseases are increasing at an alarming rate. There is no question that neurasthenia or nervous exhaustion, is the growing malady of the day, the physiological feature of the age. It is infinitely worse in America than eisswhere. The cramming process practiced in the schools, the exciting pleasure of social life, the shocks and anxieties of business, the competitive zeal that enters even into the practice of science, art, literature, and other professions—these are among the causes.

"Seven out of every ten people in the United States," continued the doctor, impressively, "are sufferers from affections of the nervous system. The majority of these doubtless think there is nothing serious the matter with them. They feel languid and duli, protably have headache and are wakeful at night, rising with a sense of fatigue in ful at night, rising with a sense of failgue in the morning, but they are persuaded that they will soon be all right again. As a mat-ter of fact, they are surely drifting toward the dreadful tortures incident to the many diseases and symptoms arising from an im-marked market series descending incoming paired nervous system-dyspepsia, insomnia ity had their origin primarily in disturbed conditions of the nervons system. I developed theories of my own and proceeded to demonstrate their practicability and value. For the past twenty years I have given my entire attention to diseases of the brain and nervous system, purening my investigations in all the leading hospitals of Europe and America. As you are probably aware, the uniform success of my method has excited considerable wonder and comment. By it many people have been cured who were thought to be incurable, and thousands of despairing sufferers have been restored to health, happiness, and lives of usefulness.

ments at 1411 Pennsylvania avenue, consist-ing of reception rooms, private offices, and labratory. His office hours are from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m., and yet he finds time to make special appointments with parties who find those hours inconvenient. He also personally con-ducts an extensive correspondence with pa-tions outside of the city as he makes a tients outside of the city as he makes a specialty of treatment by mail. Many men are sufferers from nervous exhaustion, nervous detaility, impaired memory, low spirits, irritable tempers, and the thousand and one derangements of mind and body that result from unnatural and pernicious habits con-tracted in youth through ignorance, or later excesses, resulting in a loss of manly power, wrecked constitutions, and not infrequently in softening of the brain, epilepsy, paralysis, and even dread insanity. To reach and re-claim such cases is one of Dr. Walker's aims, Foneral will take place on Wednesday at 2 p. m. from his parents residence, 227 Four-and-a-half street southwest. Relatives and friends invited to attend.

"Fell over the cliff," was the verdict of the men who answered her appeal for help and carried him back to the hotel. "He ain't the first one that has gone just so." But the next morning they learned a different story. Earton was found sitting in his chair dead, and on the table beside him was a letter explaining all. "I knew I should do it some time," he "I knew I should do it some time." he wrote. "So long as I kept my senses I was all right, but these crany spells come more and more often of late. I've had them all my life; they are an inheritance. I've always tried to keep away from him when I felt them coming on for I hated him so at those times that I knew I should kill him. Last night the demon anneover me when I had him in my power and I pushed him over the cilff. I suppose he never meant to harm me, but I can t help hating him. He's gone now and I shall soon follow."

ast in the treatment of diseases of the brain and nervous system.

Dr. Walker was found in his office at No. 1411 Pennsylvania avenue, adjoining Willard's Hotel, yesterday, and upon being interrogated regarding the alleged increase of nervous dis-eases in the United States said:

"It is quite true that such diseases are in-creasing at an alarming rate. There is no paired nervous system—dyspepsia, insomnia, melanebolia, neuraigis, spinal affections, infammation of the brain, paralysis, paresis, locometer ataxia, and so on. Indirectly, this condition may induce rheumatism, catarrh, consumption, and many other diseases.

"Is your treatment different from that of the regular schools of medicine?"

"Essentially so. It is in advance of any of the methods now taught and practiced. While a student I became convinced that the great majority of diseases common to humanity had their origin primarily in disturbed conditions of the nervous system. I de-health, happiness, and lives of usefulness after they had failed to get relief from any other source."

"What luck?" the latter asked when Jack entered, grasping his arm nervously.

Filled with his own happiness, Kingsley had thought to make the result known in a manner that would wound as little as possible, but the man's excited air threw him of his guard and he answered, abruptly:

"Its no use, Barton, the game is up with you."

Barton sank helplesely into the nearest chair and looked at Jack as if seeking further confirmation or denial of the statement.

"I did the best I could, old man," Jack went on hurriedly. "I urged your cause as fervently as though it were my own, but she fervently as though it were my own, but she fervently as though it were my own, but she fervently as though it were my own, but she fervently as though it were my own, but she fervently as though it were my own, but she fervently as though it were my own, but she said not," and then — "he paused a moment, when them again it was in a for
